Good evening everyone,

The Tropical Storm Watch for Volusia County has been "canceled" and we are now under a Wind Advisory.

In a call with Scott Spratt this evening, we can expect 20 to 30 mph sustained winds to the very northwest part of the county, Lake George area, with 15 to 20 mph sustained possible in the rest of the county. Passing squalls could produce gusts to 50 mph.

1 to 2 inches of rain, higher amounts in pockets.

Eta is now a Tropical Storm.

Timing for conditions for our area will be between around 4-5 AM to around noon on Thursday.

We will continue to push out information as we receive it..

Have a great evening!

Tropical Storm Eta Briefing Update

4:30 PM EST

Wednesday, Nov 11, 2020

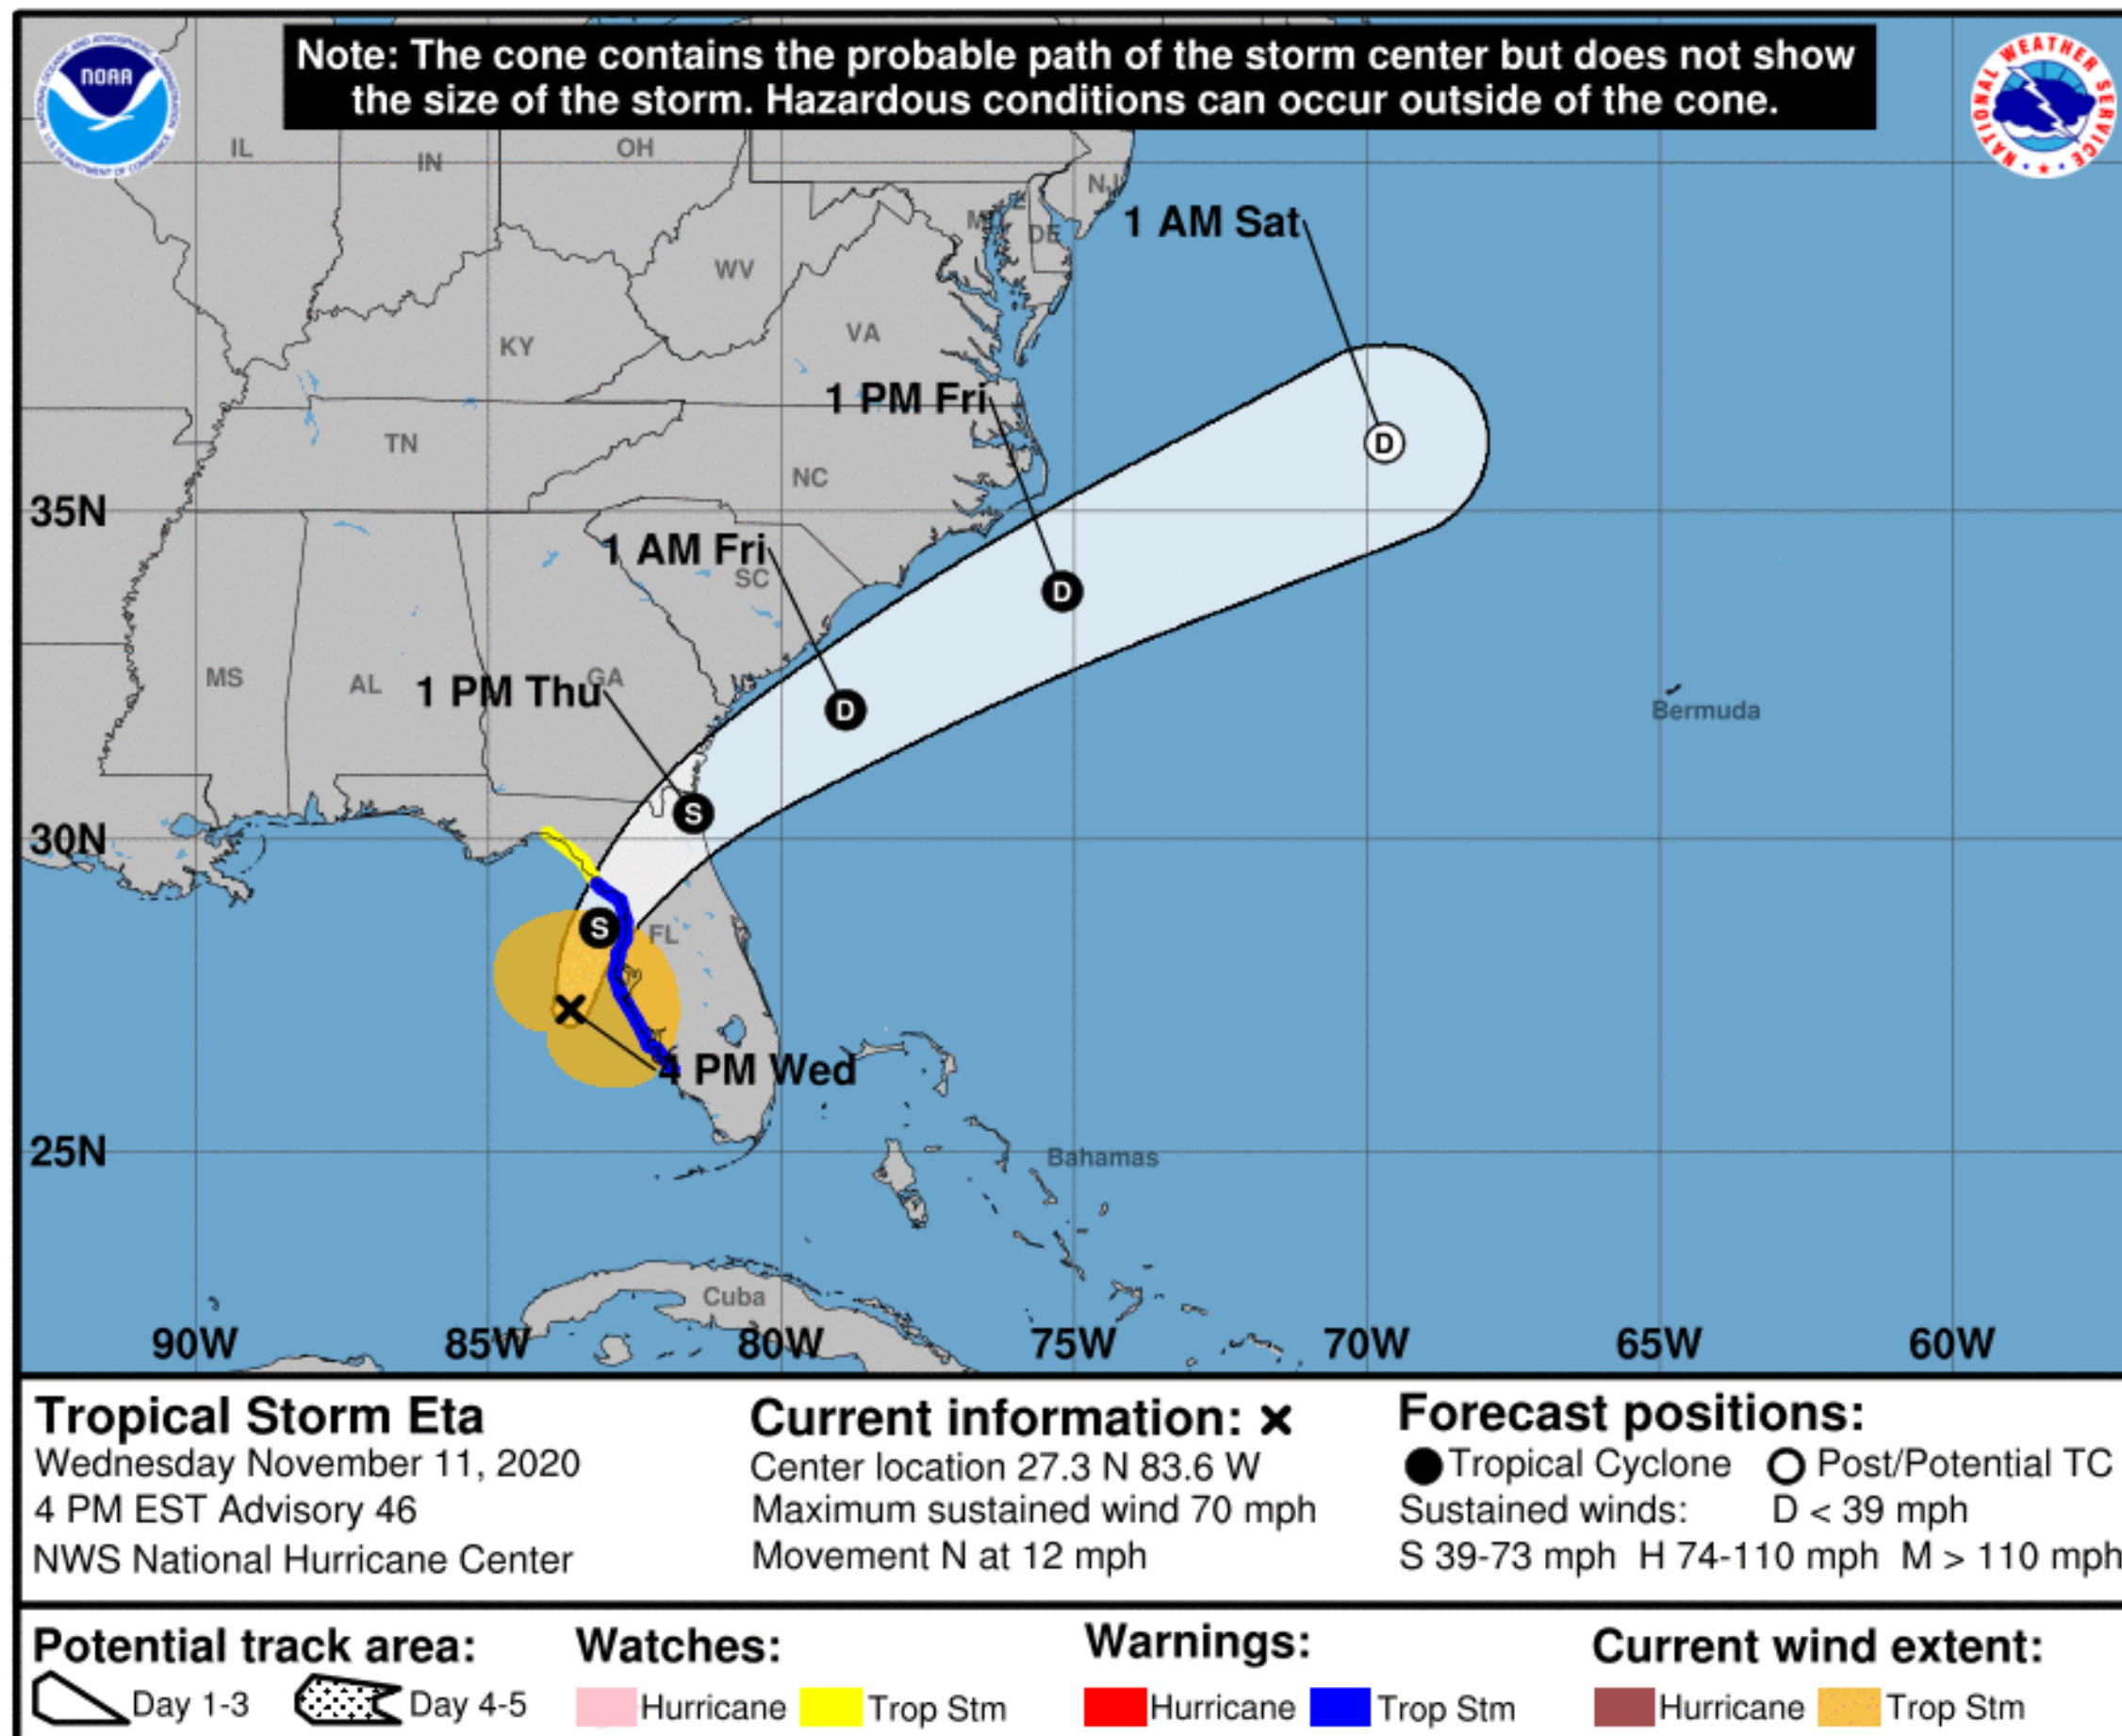

Prepared by: Scott Spratt
National Weather Service, Melbourne, FL

Situation Overview

Tropical Storm Eta

Melbourne
WEATHER FORECAST OFFICE

- Eta's track has not changed from this morning, but a slightly faster departure from NE Florida is expected. After landfall near Cedar Key as a weakening tropical storm before sunrise Thursday, Eta will move northeast and exit the NE Florida coast Thursday afternoon as a tropical depression.
- Most of the wind and rain associated with Eta will occur ahead of the center (to the east and northeast).
- The highest sustained winds 25-35 mph with gusts to around 45 mph are expected across northern Lake and northwest Volusia counties beginning between midnight tonight and the early morning hours Thursday, then diminishing mid/late morning Thursday.
- Gusty winds of 50-60 mph will be possible in passing squalls, with the highest coverage north of the I-4 corridor.
- Risk for isolated tornadoes this evening and tonight, mainly within Osceola, Orange, Seminole and Lake counties.
- Rainfall totals of 1-2" in squalls, with isolated totals of 4-5" where multiple rounds of rain occur through Thursday afternoon. Heavy rain could lead to urban flooding, especially in areas dealing with lingering flooding issues.

NOTE: Do not focus on the exact forecast track. Impacts can occur well outside the area enclosed by the forecast error cone.

Wind Threat

Tropical Storm Eta

Melbourne
WEATHER FORECAST OFFICE

County/Area	Onset Time	Ending Time	Peak Wind Forecast
Lake County	Midnight tonight West county	Late morning Thu NE county	25-35 mph, occasional gusts 45 mph, peak gusts 60 mph in heaviest squalls
Volusia County	Early Thu morning (4-5 am) West county	Around noon Thu NE county	25-30 mph, occasional gusts 40 mph, peak gusts 50 mph in heaviest squalls
Orange/Seminole Counties	Very early Thu morning (2 am) Western portions	Mid morning Thu NE portions	20-25 mph, occasional gusts 35 mph, peak gusts 50 mph in heaviest squalls

- Tropical Storm Warning for Lake County. Tropical Storm Watch canceled for Volusia County and replaced by a Wind Advisory (no change to expected impacts from earlier briefing).
- The time period for strongest winds will occur from around midnight tonight through noon Thursday as the center of Eta makes its closest approach to east central Florida. Breezy conditions will precede the time of strongest winds this afternoon/evening - and will also occur after the peak, into Thursday evening.
- The time period of strongest winds at any particular area within Lake/Volusia counties (especially northern portions) is expected to be 4-6 hours, and 3-4 hours within Orange/Seminole counties).
- Farther south, sustained wind are not expected to be significant – generally 15-20 mph, but with gusts around 40 mph in heavy showers.

Tornado Threat

Tropical Storm Eta

Melbourne
WEATHER FORECAST OFFICE

- A threat for isolated tornadoes may develop this evening and continue into the early morning hours of Thursday.
- The greatest threat will be within Osceola, Orange, Seminole and Lake counties, with lower threat for the remainder of east-central Florida.
- While several circulations were detected on radar over the eastern Gulf and in the Tampa Bay area earlier today, no tornadoes have been reported. The Tornado Watch for west-central Florida has expired. Another Tornado Watch may be issued this evening for western portions of Region 5.

Heavy Rain Threat

Tropical Storm Eta

Melbourne
WEATHER FORECAST OFFICE

High End Amount - 10% Chance of Higher Liquid Precipitation

Valid: 11/11/2020 07:00 AM - 11/14/2020 07:00 AM EST

The highest rain totals are expected to occur closest to the track of Eta, generally from northern Osceola County to northern Brevard County, where 1-2 inches are expected, with isolated totals of 4-5 inches possible – especially within Lake, Volusia, Seminole and northwest Osceola counties.

Farther south, rainfall of a half inch to one inch is forecast. There is a small chance that a slow-moving rain band could extend into this area, which would increase the rain totals.

River Flood Hazards

Tropical Storm Eta

Melbourne
WEATHER FORECAST OFFICE

- St. Johns at Astor: forecast to remain in minor flood stage near 2.9 feet, but could rise slightly into moderate flood stage (3.0 feet) if the higher rain totals (4-5") fall within the basin.
- St. Johns at Lake Harney: rise from 5.4 feet into action stage (6.0 feet) by late week, reaching 6.4 feet by late weekend.
- St. Johns at Deland, Sanford and Cocoa: rises likely, but remaining below action stages.
- Little Wekiva and Shingle Creek: highly dependent upon rain totals and duration directly within the basins. Expected event totals up to 1-2" will cause minor rises, but forecast to remain below action stage at this time.

Key Points and Summary

Melbourne
WEATHER FORECAST OFFICE

Tropical Storm Eta

- Eta is forecast to move northeast across the northern Florida peninsula Thursday morning as a weakening tropical storm/depression.
- The threat for strong/gusty winds, heavy rain and isolated tornadoes will be greatest near the track, mainly affecting areas north and west of the Interstate 4 corridor.
- Sustained winds of 25-35 mph with gusts around 45 mph (except up to 60 mph in heavy squalls) are most likely from Osceola and Brevard counties north and west (and especially across Lake and Volusia counties).
- The time period of greatest wind/rain impacts will be from around midnight tonight to noon Thursday. There will be a threat for isolated tornadoes this evening into the early morning hours of Thursday.
- Conditions will improve once the center of Eta reaches near the northeast Florida coast early Thursday afternoon.

December 22-23, 2019 Briefing on Gulf Storm

Sunday, December 22, 2019

Prepared by:

Tony Cristaldi & David Sharp

National Weather Service, Melbourne, FL

Changes Since Last Briefing

Morning Assessment & Updates

Melbourne
WEATHER FORECAST OFFICE

- A developing gale center will transition from over the Gulf of Mexico across the Florida Peninsula today and tomorrow.
- HIGH Confidence exists for multiple weather hazards to impact east central Florida, including early holiday travelers.

Greatest Impacts:

1. Heavy rainfall & strong gusty winds are primary concerns.
2. A risk of severe storms later today & tonight:
  - “Slight” for the Treasure Coast & inland to near Lake Okeechobee
  - “Marginal” for the Space Coast & inland to near Kissimmee
3. Dangerous boating & beach conditions will persist.

Key Points

- Widespread rainfall today and tonight, becoming heavy at times within embedded storms.
  - Equal chances for all locations across east central Florida relative to the heavy rain threat. Although the excessive rain threat is greatest north of Florida, it remains a local concern, especially given recent generous rains.
  - Locations which realize recurring embedded storms are subject to the greatest threat; localized flooding possible.
- More so, there is the additional potential for severe thunderstorms and isolated tornadoes later today and tonight.

Forecast Rainfall Amounts (Sun Dec 22 to Mon Dec 23)

- Widespread totals of 1 to 2 inches areawide
  - These amounts are slightly less than previously forecast.
- “Reasonable Worst Case Scenario”
  - 3-6 inches of rain in spots; mainly along the path of weather system and within coastal counties.
- Impacts from Heavy Rain:
  - Ponding on roadways, and flooding of poor drainage and low-lying areas.
  - In event of worst case rainfall - road closures possible due to high water in poor drainage zones, and overflowing of retention ponds and drainage canals.

Excessive Rainfall Outlook

Sunday Morning through Monday Morning

- Dangerous conditions continue, lasting through at least Monday.
- Minor beach erosion possible around times of high tide.

Marine/Boating Hazards

- Seas 6-9 feet within 20 miles of coast, and 9-12 feet well offshore. Occasional wind gusts near Gale Force possible today and tonight.
- Dangerous boating conditions ongoing, and will last through at least Monday Night.

Saint Johns River Concerns

Forecast and Impacts

Melbourne
WEATHER FORECAST OFFICE

- Persistent heavy rainfall could lead water level rises at all forecast points on the Saint Johns River.
- Heavy rain in a short period of time may lead to quick rises on the Little Wekiva River and Shingle Creek.
  - River rises will depend on where heavy rain falls within the respective basin, and exactly how much.
